

Quinssa Programme Notes 2nd October 2010.

They came expecting another scalp but the Indian Braves lost out to the Harlequins' Cavalry last week. I enjoyed the visit of the Exeter Chiefs, not only for the win but the opportunity to write so many clichés in just a short article. A case of "Too Many Chiefs and Not Enough Indians" on the field, and Quins had their wagons already circled for the defence, while our own tame Mohican (Joe Marler) made some early raids on their camp. Tomahawks, peace pipes and pretty squaws were sadly missing from their wigwams but there were some great headdresses on show. They are fine supporters and they're welcome here anytime. So how did you celebrate the win? Perhaps like us you went for an Indian somewhere local!

Now we've got our wagon train on the road it's got to be show-time today and an opportunity to pluck some Falcon feathers. Our old friend Charlie Amesbury will be hoping to prove a thing or two but let's hope he goes back up North with nought to crow about.

The tickets for the away game in Bayonne will be available for collection today from our stand in the Kings Bar. Any queries about these tickets should be directed to warren@quinssa.org.uk We're now doing the same for the game at Prato and you can reserve your tickets by contacting scott@quinssa.org.uk See details in the weekly mailer. Hopefully we'll have news on the Connaught game very soon. With the visit of the Prato fans in two weeks time we are trying to arrange a suitable venue to entertain them locally. A group of 50 are travelling together and we hope everyone at Quins will make them welcome. Keep a look out for information on what is happening.

To help you with your match day enjoyment we at Quinssa have got a stock of high quality, reusable, recycled, collapsible drinks carriers. They can fold up and fit in your pocket and are designed to carry two, three or four plastic pint, half pint or coffee cups. They will cost £3.50 for Members and £4.00 for non members and they are available from the Quinssa Stand in the Kings Bar We only have a limited stock of 100 at the moment so get them quick (please bring correct change if you possibly can), if they are very popular then we will reorder. All profits will go to the Academy Fund.

Quinssa have a full house of activities planned for the season ahead including some old favourites.
